How to mend a broken heart

True love turns into game over. Follow our guide and learn how to get over him or her.

Step 1: Let yourself go

Wallow in your pain for at least three days. Think of how you used to make outside your front door until your father stumbled on your. Refuse all phone calls (but check your messages and emails every ten minutes). Turn down any invitations to hang around with your "gang". Tell them you need to be alone and give yourself time for everything to sink in. Finally, cry buckets over your loved one.

Step 2: Hanging out

By now, you should be fed up with staying home. So, spend time with your friends, talk about what a loser your boy/girlfriend was. Change into a new you: get a haircut or a new outfit. If you can't afford new clothes, borrow some from a brother, sister or friend. Get rid of everything that reminds you of him or her. Not the CDs, though. Whatever you do, don't call your ex.

Step 3: Get back in action

Make plans for future fun. Flirt a lot, smile a lot, dance a lot. Hit every party going, even if you haven't been invited. That's right, crash!

Enjoy each and every minute as if it were the last, but act cautiously and be smart. Act like you love life and it'll end up being true.

Step 4: Pull yourself together

No matter how right this person seemed, if they dumped a cool person like you, they were obviously nuts. Remember, no one can make you feel inferior without your consent.

The lady and the gorillas

Dian Fossey was born in San Francisco, California, in 1932. Her interest in animals started very early, when she was a child.

In 1963, after a trip to Africa, where she met the famous anthropologist Dr. Louis Leakey, she became interested in mountain gorillas.

Dian began observing gorillas in Zaire, now the Democratic Republic of Congo, in 1967.

Soon she moved to Rwanda, where she started the Karisoke Research Center.

She was the first person to have voluntary contact with gorillas. She could earn their trust, sit among them, and play with them. In Rwanda she became very attached to a particular gorilla that she named Digit. One day, Digit was killed by poachers. Dian was so angry that she started a campaign against the killing of gorillas.

With the help of many people she established the Digit Fund. The Fund helps researchers in Rwanda to protect the gorilla population even today.

Dian lived among the gorillas for almost two decades and dedicated her life to saving them.

We now know much more about gorilla's behavior as a result of her work.

On December 26, 1985, Dian Fossey was found murdered in her cabin. Her death is still unsolved.

Dian wrote the book Gorillas in the mist, 1980.

Everybody can make the difference

Everyone has the right to good medical care, clean streets, clean drinking water, a leisure center to visit at weekends, a public library, electric lighting, decent day nurseries, etc. These basic needs of every citizen have to be provided by the government.

In Brazil, a lot of people do not have a decent place to live in or enough food to eat, or a school in which to study. Some of them do not have public transport to go to work or to school, and there are those who have no job at all - the jobless.

Fortunately, some people are taking action! They are not simply talking or protesting about what needs to be done for their community. They are getting organized to promote changes in their school, neighborhoods, villages and cities. They help at school, they paint walls, they build or repair houses, they cook and they clean. They do what is in their power.

Nowadays, young people and grownups are taking part in various projects involving voluntary work. Their goal is to improve the quality of life and the standard of living all over the country. These projects are generally called solidarity projects.
